

THIRD HUNDRED YEARS

A great deal of the history of America as we know it began at Provincetown.

Even before the Pilgrims made their landing at Plymouth they had hove to under the lee of the land at the tip of the Cape and there drawn up the compact which was to be one of the earliest and most significant symbols of the enduring cooperation of the American people.

May the third hundred years at Provincetown look forth from the unusual vantage point of this outpost of the Western world to see a greater community, a greater Cape, a greater New England and a greater United States constantly evolving in the strong unity of interests among the American people which had its inception in the harbor of Provincetown!
