

- About 1880 -

Iron fence encloses the Ben Lancy House (now the Historical Museum).

Right: Small's Tailor Shop
 Harry Hopkin's Candy Shop
 Hannah Curran's Millinery Store
 Central House

Note Center Methodist Church in background. The Provincetown Theatre is now in the spot of the two buildings next to the Tailor Shop.

Same scene about 1900.
 also facing east.

 1901

The building next to the Central House, owned by Charles B. Snow has been sold to Mr. Philander Crocker, whose family will occupy the upper floor. Miss Hannah will occupy the lower floor for milinery parlors. Carpenters are at work altering and improving the interior of the building.

Miss Crocker, who has occupied her present milinery parlors for more than ten years, will be much missed in this vicinity. Her numerous friends and patrons wish her success in her new and more commodious rooms. Neighbors on Bradford Street regret the removal of this family, they having been most kind and pleasant neighbors.

.. Carl Nickerson, the Clam Digger