

Lower Cape Codders were quite skilled in moving heavy objects. Various "lever and screw" companies operated here in the 19th Century. Usually practice was gained salvaging the hulls of ships on the outer shores, often during unpleasant weather. Above, about 1900, on Tremont Street a store was moved and turned 90 degrees before being attached to a house which fronts on Mechanic Street.