

Provincetown Advocate - - November 6, 1969

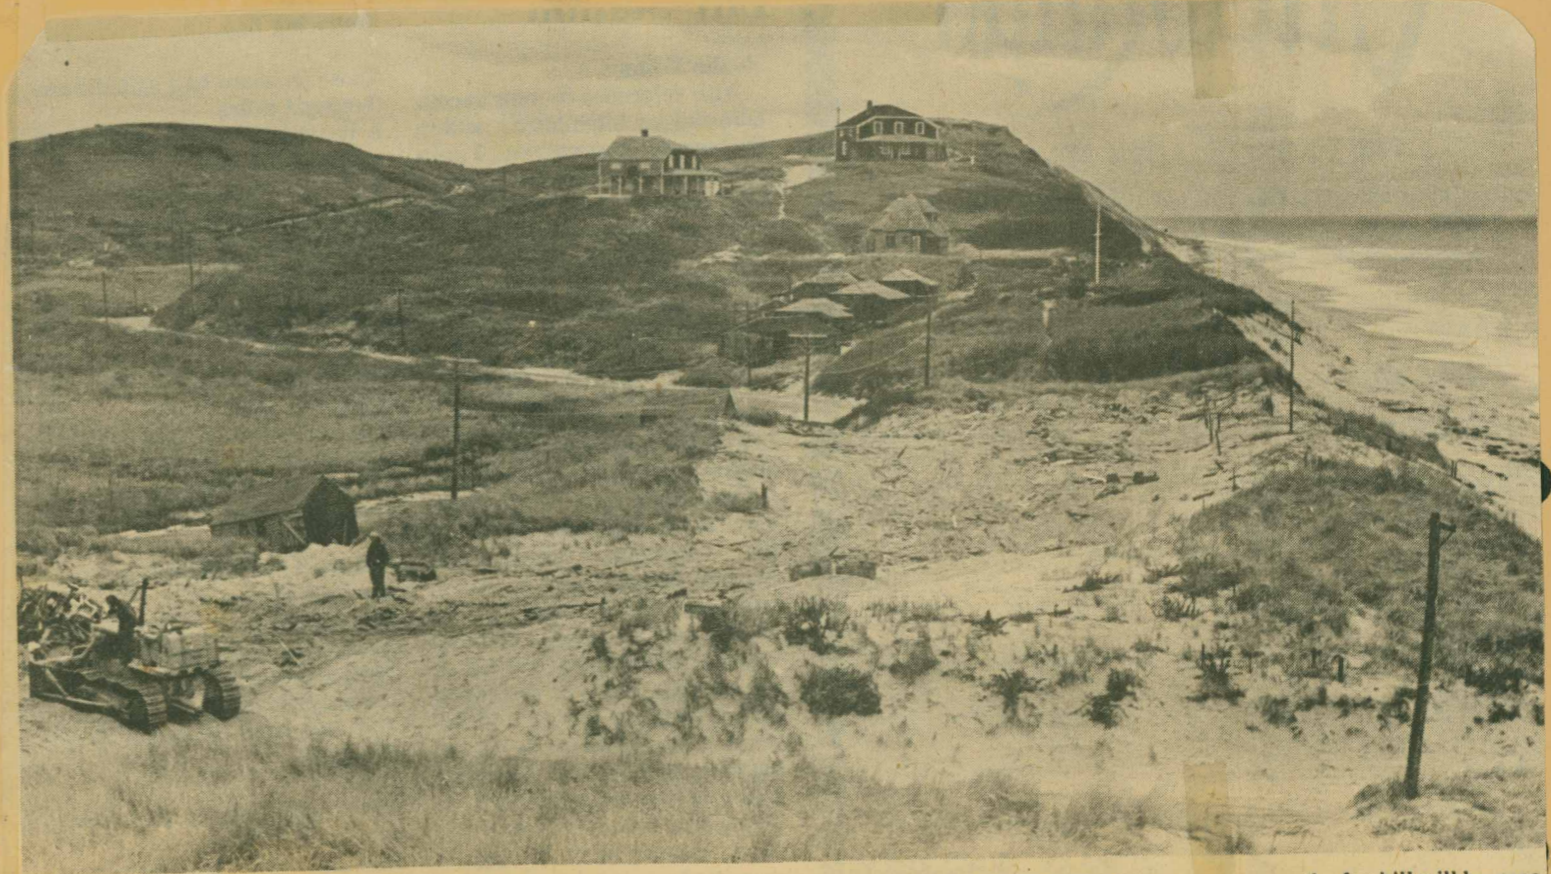

ABOUT 1910, Ballston Beach was a quiet summer community of rental cottages, seen at top in Louis M. Snow's photo taken by moonlight. Road curving out of the picture at right connected with King's Highway, a mile down the Pamet River. Recent photo by sunlight shows most of the same buildings moved inland as the shore eroded. According to barrister S. Osborn Ball, they're occupied in summer by the grandchildren of former tenants.

Ballston Beach, Truro, Mass.

Arrow points to the Ball Cottages - 1915

Ossie Ball's old cottages in Truro are being torn down by the National Seashore. Everything except the two houses on the far hill will be gone.

(Provincetown Advocate - November 19, 1970)