PROVINCETOWN HERO BURIED

Honors Paid to L. A. Young, Who Died in France

PROVINCETOWN, Nov. 4.—Hundreds of the town's people, municipal officials, members of the wireless station and the local military forces this afternoon attended the funeral services in the Town Hall in honor of Lewis Armstrong Young, whose body had lain in state in the Town Hall since its arrival from France.

Young was machinist's mate, first class, on the United States gunboat Marietta. He died of influenza in October, 1919, and was buried in the military cemetery at Polliac. It was the first Provincetown body to be brought back from France.

The very impressive service, with full military honors and the Masonic burial ritual, was under the direction of the Morris Light Post of the American Legion. The Rev. Joseph Montgomery delivered the prayer. The Masonic service was under the direction of the King Hiram Lodge of Masons. In full regalia the large delegation of Masons attended the exercises. The representatives of the army and navy wore the uniforms of their organizations.

The casket was covered by Old Glory and beautiful floral tributes. At the head of the casket were red and yellow poppies, symbolic of Flanders field, whence was taken the soldier's body. At the foot of the casket was a beautiful bouquet of roses. A touching tribute was an immense floral piece from the local post of the American Legion. It was a fac-simile of the legion button.

Members of the wireless station at Highland Heights attended the funeral, and were added to the firing squad at the cemetery. Taps were sounded by Frank Barrett, bugler, and members of the legion.

The pallbearers were John Cook, William Pierce, Carl Snow, Frank Paige, Edward Gasple, Joseph Nunn, William Drisko and Manuel Prada. Louis Armstrong Young is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Young, and a sister, Miss Josephine Young.

McKenna—Young

In New York City, on July 15th, Miss Josephine Young, daughter of William H. and Anna Hughes-Young was united in marriage to Dr. Ernest J. McKenna, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. McKenna, 78 College Road, Chestnut Hill, Newton. The marriage was a quiet one and witnessed by the friends of the couple who were chaperoning the young people on the trip.

Miss Young is well known to Provincetown circles, a delightful young lady with many friends and graduate of the P. H. S. class '21, a leader in many local affairs, and has been a student at the Wheelock Seminary, Boston, the past year.

Dr. McKenna is a dentist of much repute and served the government in the late war at the Marine Hospital, Provincetown. Five years ago the acquaintance began which has culminated in the marriage. His business office is 100 Boylston Street, Boston.

At present they are on their honeymoon trip and will return to Provincetown for a portion of the summer at the summer home of the Youngs at North Truro.

May the sunshine of mutual affection be bright and cloudless as they pass over life's road and no impediment that energy and affection cannot easily overcome. Here's to their health and prosperity, a pledge in which all their friends most cordially join.
