Greetings from the Director

Dear Family and Friends,

Welcome to the return of Amahl and the Night Visitors! You may be a first time patron of Menotti's famous opera or you may have seen one or both of our prior productions of Amahl, but no matter what brought you here, I'm glad to have you as part of our family. Last year I took a break. I didn't believe I could breathe fresh life into this piece. Many people were disappointed and as it turned out, I was one of them. I felt as if I neglected to go home to my family for the holidays.

What made this tiny little opera such a welcome part of the holidays here in Provincetown? The people. The people in it, the people behind it, and the people who helped create it. How different all of those people are! Why not bring back Amahl and show the diversity that it can handle. Just like Provincetown can handle the diversity of all the people who live here.

Amahl is a 'people' story.

So, with the largest cast ever assembled, I invite you to sit back and enjoy the performances of this incredible group of people who have gathered together to tell you that story.

Happy Holidays, Provincetown!

History of the Provincetown Theatre Company
-serving the community for over 38 years

The Provincetown Theatre Company opened its doors for the first time on March 29, 1963. Then it was known as the Provincetown Theatre Workshop and presented its first production, an original fantasy called, Circles in the Snow, in the Parish House of St. Mary's of the Harbor on the East End of Provincetown. Then, as now, the company consisted of a creative mix of professional, semi-professional and talented non-professional local actors, writers, directors and technicians. From the beginning, the company has emphasized a mixture of staged readings, original plays by local writers, and works by established playwrights—a combination that continues to be the core focus of the company.

From 1963 through 1972, the company changed locations many times, mounting more and more ambitious productions. They performed a wide selection of plays, readings, and even musical revues in a variety of venues, including Town Hall, The Crown and Anchor, The Provincetown Art Association, and Piggy's (a former nightclub on Shankpainter Road).

In the Winter of 1973, the Provincetown Theatre Workshop was re-christened as The Provincetown Theatre Company and The Provincetown Academy of Performing Arts, by drawing up a new constitution, and establishing itself as a not-for-profit organization. An influx of year-rounders in the early 70's increased both audiences and company participants. In the years that followed, new talent came to light and a number of successful productions ensued, with a mixture of existing material, original adaptations and new plays. In the late 1970's the theatre company was an itinerant group, performing in various spots around town until it re-established itself at the Art Association in 1982 with a full season of productions.

Having a permanent performing space in the early 80's made for the Golden Era of the Provincetown Theatre Company. Productions such as A Thurbur Carnival, The Importance of Being Earnest, A Streetcar Named Desire, and The Dining Room, earned the company numerous Evelyn Lawson A.C.T.E. awards. In 1984, long-time company members, Ray and Nicholas Wells, deeded two acres of land on Harry Kemp Way to the company; this generous donation continues to play an important role in the future plans of the company.

In 1988-89, the company moved to the Provincetown Inn and for the first time had a year round performing space for plays, revues and staged readings. It was during this period that the company hired its first Artistic Director, the late Michael Prevulsky, who directed a number of acclaimed productions for PTC. The company also entered into an artistic collaboration with acclaimed artist and playwright Edward Gorey during this period and produced three of his plays. During the early 90's, the company produced the enormously popular AIDS Quilt memorial musical, Elegies for Angels, Punks and Raging Queens.

Hard times fell on the company in 1993 with the loss of the performing space at the Inn. A turning point came in the fortunes of the company at the Annual Meeting in 1995, when the PTC Board re-shaped its structure, re-examined its mission, and re-dedicated itself to ensuring that a local, community-based theatre company would continue to survive in Provincetown. In 1996 ties were re-established with The Provincetown Inn, where the company continues its spring and summer performances.

In addition to a spring/summer season, the company produces a highly successful Playwriting Competition that celebrates the work of a Massachusetts playwright with a cash award and a staged reading of his/her work. Our Winter Staged Readings series at Napi's Restaurant continues to be an off-season hit with both original and established scripts being performed by local actors.

From its inception, PTC has provided a forum for Cape Cod playwrights. PTC continues this commitment to the playwright with our Fall, Winter and Spring Playwright's Festivals. PTC has also joined with Campus Provincetown to offer classes in Acting and Playwriting.

In the fall of 2000 PTC formed a Youth Theatre Company that works with other arts, educational and environmental organizations to provide educational and artistic support to youth at risk. The fall of 2000 was also an historical time for PTC for the first time in 25 years, Provincetown will have its first permanent theater space. PTC and The Provincetown Repertory Theatre have agreed to share a theater to be opened in the Spring of 2002 on the site of the former Provincetown Mechanics.

The Provincetown Theatre Company has provided many Provincetown and Cape Cod residents with their first theatrical experiences, from the vantage points of both the audience and the stage. It has nourished the ambitions of many individuals interested in pursuing a career in the theater. And it continues to be, most importantly of all, a company passionately devoted to the community in which it was founded and enthusiastically supports.

A thriving, energized theatre company, PTC is a vital force in Provincetown theater and is committed to active fundraising, including benefit performances during the Winter season and an annual membership drive. If you'd like to volunteer to help PTC, become a member or contribute to our Fund For The Future, please go out to the lobby for more information or call 508-487-8673.

History In The Making: A New Theatre For Provincetown

On November 12, 2000, Provincetown Mechanics was dedicated as the home of "The Provincetown Theater". This was an historic day since its been almost 25 years since the famed Provincetown Playhouse burned down, leaving permanent theater in Provincetown homeless. The Provincetown Theater will be shared by the Provincetown Theatre Company (also known as the Provincetown Academy of the Performing Arts) and the Provincetown Repertory Theatre (Rep). Both theater companies will mount separate seasons and continue to offer the Cape Cod community some of the most innovative and daring theatre around. In an effort of cooperation and good will, PTC and The Rep have signed an unprecedented agreement to share Cape Cod's newest theatre space.

For almost 38 years, the Provincetown Theatre company has been a nomad, moving from one location to another. The Provincetown Repertory Theatre has had much the same story to tell for its five years of existence, performing at the Monument Museum and Town Hall. At last these two groups will have a place to hang their lights and store their risers.

Governed by a board that includes representatives of both theater companies and members of the community, this new theatre will add luster to Provincetown's already stellar reputation as the nation's premier art colony. Seventy-five years ago Eugene O'Neill helped create modern American theater in Provincetown with the help of Harry Kemp, Susan Glaspell and Mary Heaton Vorse. It's only fitting that Provincetown continues to expand its local and national reputation as a home for American theater.
